Dr. Corson Tells Of Work In Community For Teachers

Where They May Contribute To A General Uplift

Supt. Zemer Gives Final Address Of Successful Session

The last session of the institute Friday afternoon was opened with music, consisting of songs led by Mr. Chubb and a piano solo by Walter Wood.

"The Teacher Outside of School" was the subject of Dr. Corson's last address. In this talk he laid stress upon the importance of a teacher trying to exert an influence for good in the community in which she works. She can do this by setting a good example at all times by being a good citizen of the community, entering into those activities which tend to raise the standards of a community and make it a better place in which to live.

After a short intermission, Supt. Zemer spoke on "The Teacher's Opportunity." He said in part that in no other profession are there so many opportunities as there are in teaching. There is a great opportunity for self-awakening, for study, and for service to the pupils in many ways outside of the regular school work.

Teachers can do much toward forming the character of pupils by suggestions given from time to time, by influencing their reading, by interesting them in good books, and by awakening their interest in many other things that are worth while in life.

A short business session was then held, at which the following officers were elected:

President—R. L. Jones.
Secretary—Miss Mary Devoe.
Treasurer—A. L. Murry.

MINNIE WEIGHS 300 POUNDS STRIPPED

Fostoria, Aug. 19—She behaved shamefully, did Minnie, right on Summit street, too. She resisted arrest, drew a big crowd, and required the attention of several officers before being hauled away, protesting volubly, to jail.

Minnie is boarding and rooming now at the police station—in the tramp room. But she won't remain very long in the tramp room. She weighs 300 pounds—stripped—and her board bill is mounting to terrific proportions. She will be sentenced soon—will Minnie, a Poland China hog.

MYSTERY

SURROUNDING INFANTILE PARALYSIS THOUGHT SOLVED

Physicians Awaiting Final Test Of Cause Before Announcing Important Discoveries—Advice Is Given

New York, Aug. 19—Important discoveries concerning infantile paralysis by surgeons who are working to check the epidemic, probably will be announced soon, it was learned last night.

Surprising progress has been made in laboratories and by research and field workers, it was said, but before an announcement is made of the cause of the disease or a specific for it, the physicians propose to be in a position where no doubt can be thrown on their conclusions.

Health Commissioner Emerson said last night that nine out of 11 monkeys had been inoculated successfully by pathologists and that some of the mysteries of the disease hitherto puzzling to medical science had been solved.

The results in Washington have been so encouraging that the city bureau of laboratories here has issued an appeal to the public for all kinds of pet animals afflicted recently with paralysis to be used for experimental purposes.

The idea is to find some animal, it was explained, having a type of paralysis that may provide useful study in obtaining information about anterior poliomyelitis.

The health department today issued the following advice to parents:

"Keep your house or apartment absolutely clean. Go over all woodwork daily with a damp cloth. Never allow dry sweeping. Screen your windows against flies. Do not allow garbage to accumulate. Kill all forms of vermin, such as bed bugs and roaches.

"Pay special attention to bodily cleanliness. Give your children a bath every day and see that all clothing is clean. Keep your children by themselves as much as possible.

"Do not take your children with you when you go shopping. Do not allow your children to be kissed."

HOBOS

HONOR GIRL DRESSED AS ONE OF THEM

Induce Her To Leave Train And Turn Her Over To Police Who Take Young Miss Home

Gallion, Aug. 19 — There's honor among hoboes, too, just as there is among thieves, and just as there is not—according to many of the $1.35 dime novels flooding the market—among the elite.

Edna Ralston, 15, daughter of a Winchester, (Ind.), man, became tired of being a girl and staying at home. So, donning her brother's clothes, she swung herself in true, man-like style aboard a Big Four freight train, became acquainted with a party of tramps, and rode along with them.

But the hoboes knew she was a girl. They induced her to leave the train, took her to a house, and called the police. She told police here she was going to Cleveland to work. Probation Officer Hiatt of Winchester took her back home.

Uplifting Influence Of Fraternal Orders Is Dwelled Upon—Draws Out Moral Lessons From Masonic Teachings

The annual picnic of Farmer's Lodge, F. & A. M., of Fredonia, was held Thursday at Cat Run.

Judge Lewis B. Houck of Mt. Vernon was the principal speaker of the day and, in reporting his address, the Newark American Tribune has the following to say:

He laid great stress on the teachings of Masonry and other fraternal orders. He spoke of the formation of societies for mutual help and improvement, how they were doing great things for the world today and how those who came under their influence were not only uplifted but in their turn aided in bringing those with whom they come into contact upon a higher sphere of living.

He drew out the lessons of morality and of humanity which came from the uplifting teachings of Masonry, and made an eloquent appeal for a better and cleaner and higher life.

LOCAL MEN ARE PROMINENT

In Seventh-Day Adventist Camp Meeting

ELDER ASHTON THE SPEAKER

At First Night Session, Delivering Powerful Address—Elder Slade Presides Over Session Of Ohio Conference

Newark, Aug. 19—Led in song by Elder H. A. Weaver of Van Wert, O., and in prayer by Dr. D. H. Kress of Washington, D. C., the great camp of the Adventists in Moundbuilders' park opened Thursday evening, at the 7:30 hour. The president of the conference, Elder E. K. Slade, spoke on the "Victorious Life." His sermon was a masterly presentation of the possibilities in human experience of getting victory over sin and his appeal to the host of campers present resulted in almost all present arising to their feet in a new dedication to God and to His service.

The great pavilion tent was well filled, bespeaking a tremendous audience for every meeting of the ten days' convention. Friday morning the first meeting of the camp was held at 5:30, a devotional service conducted by Elder W. W. Miller of Springfield, one of the ministers of the conference, a man who has had six years of service as a missionary in India.

At the 3:00 o'clock hour, Professor W. W. Prescott of Washington, D. C., field secretary of the general conference of Seventh-Day Adventists, just returned from an extended trip through South America, addressed the campers and visitors. The professor related himself to present conditions and the time, and the outlook, from the standpoint of prophecy, and in the light of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Friday evening at the 7:30 hour, Professor N. S. Ashton of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, president of Mt. Vernon Academy, an institution for the education of the youth in the cause for which Seventh-Day Adventists are set, spoke. His subject was "What Nation Will Next Rule the World? Will it be Great Britain or Will it be Germany?"

The professor not only handled this subject in the light of the terrible conditions of affairs in Europe at the present time, but also from the standpoint of the prophecies of the Word of God.

The first meeting of the conference session of the Ohio Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists was called to order Friday morning by Elder E. A. Slade, president of the conference, at ten o'clock. The roll call was responded to by a host of delegates from Cincinnati, Columbus, Springfield, Dayton, Toledo, Mt. Vernon, Findlay and many other cities and towns of the state. Little else was done at this opening meeting save the seating of delegates, reading of the president's address and the providing for the usual session committees. The president's address showed a splendid increase in souls and finances.

PTOMAIN

Does Not Exist In Berries, Hence Poison Impossible

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

The death of Chester Daub, a fifteen-year-old boy, is ascribed in a report to "ptomaine poison caused by eating wild blackberries." It is said that after having indulged in wild blackberries while upon a bicycle trip to the country the lad became violently ill. His death resulted soon afterward.

Ptomaine poison is found in decomposing meat. It is a cadaveric poison. Ptomaines are not vegetable alkaloids. The careless use of "ptomaine poisoning" in accounting for death or illness caused by overeating or eating something unfit for consumption is frequent.

Whatever the real cause of death in this case it was not ptomaine poison caused by eating wild blackberries. A tin of decomposed meat bought along the way might cause ptomaine poison, and the illness might be ascribed mistakenly to indigestion in fruit. Unripe blackberries might cause serious illness, but not ptomaine poisoning.

Wild blackberries which are ripe are as wholesome as any other fruit. At this time of the year they constitute an important factor in the food supply of thousands of families. It would be unfortunate if there should get abroad, among the ignorant and among the poor to whom the blackberry season is a boon, the idea that wild blackberries are possible conveyers of ptomaine poison.

About 30 years ago some one started the report that the locusts had laid eggs on the mulberries and made them poisonous. Mulberries—not as widely found or as much used as blackberries—were avoided generally. About the time the mulberry season was over the report got around to scientists who made, and caused to be published, the statement that the mulberry crop had not been poisoned and that the report was groundless. The cabbage snake story, which went all over the United States about a dozen years ago, is well remembered. It is said to have originated in the mind of an inventive resident correspondent of a newspaper who conceived the idea of killing off a fictional family in a remote neighborhood and giving the cause of death as the cooking of a small snake which had secreted itself in a head of cabbage. The cabbage snake, a distinct species, found only in cabbage heads, became the garden dragon all over the country. Even educated and intelligent persons ate cabbage with misgivings, and many families let their table supply rot in the patch. Of course, the cabbage snake had no more existence in reality than the horseshoe snake, which, as every old-time plantation negro believed firmly, comes into being whenever a hair from a horse's mane or tail is dropped in a brook or pond.

No matter how purely fictional and how obviously untrue, in the view of the few who have knowledge of the subject, any fantastic story about a newly discovered deadly danger in some variety of food is likely to travel far and receive general credence. It should be understood that nobody has ever suffered from ptomaine poison as a result of eating blackberries, wild or cultivated, and that blackberries and blackberry cobbler are just as healthful this year as they always have been.

The selling price of wheat jumped from $1.50 to $1.75 a bushel in the local market Saturday. William M. It is probable, Mr. Coup stated, that wheat will touch $2 a bushel.
